

Bell Palsy

Paralysis of Cranial Nerve 7 (Facial nerve)

Nathaniel Yomogida, SPT

Chloë Kerstein, SPT

Table of contents

- “Bell palsy is the most common peripheral paralysis of the seventh cranial nerve, with an onset that is rapid and unilateral^{warnerBellPalsy2024?}.”
- “This is an idiopathic condition causing partial or complete weakness of one-half of the face along with changes in taste, sensitivity to sound, and alteration in lacrimation and salivation^{warnerBellPalsy2024?}.”
- “This activity illustrates the evaluation and management of Bell palsy and explains the role of the interprofessional team in improving care for patients with this condition^{warnerBellPalsy2024?}.”