

Hawkins-Kennedy Test

Nathaniel Yomogida, SPT

Chloë Kerstein, SPT

Table of contents

“Kennedy-Hawkins sign test was performed with the patient standing. The affected arm was forward-flexed 90° and then forcibly medially rotated. This test was considered positive if the patient complained of pain into the deltoid or anterior shoulder during the maneuver”¹

1. Gill HS, El Rassi G, Bahk MS, Castillo RC, McFarland EG. Physical examination for partial tears of the biceps tendon. The American Journal of Sports Medicine. 2007;35(8):1334-1340. doi:10.1177/0363546507300058